Reading Strategy & Tips

How to Approach the Readings

1. Required readings: Read these carefully before class. Focus on:
 - The main research question
 - The key argument/theory
 - The main evidence
 - The conclusions and implications
2. Optional readings: Choose based on your interests
 - If presenting on Irish Context that week, read the optional to deepen understanding
 - If writing Project 1 on a related topic, read for background
 - If you find the topic fascinating, read for enrichment
3. Self-study readings (Week 9): Only if interested in dictatorship/autocracy
 - Provides context we couldn't cover in class time
 - Useful for comparative political economy
4. Additional optional readings: These are from Prof. Gillanders' course
 - Great for going deeper
 - Useful for Project 1 literature review
 - Often more recent empirical evidence

Reading Order Within Each Week

1. Start with required reading(s)
2. If time permits, read optional readings
3. Browse additional optional for Project 1 ideas
4. Don't feel obligated to read everything — focus on what's most valuable for your learning

Active Reading Tips

Ask yourself:

- What's the puzzle/question?
- What's the theory/mechanism?
- What's the evidence?
- Does this apply to Ireland? Why or why not?
- What are the strengths and limitations?

Take notes as you read. Summarize the main argument in 2–3 sentences.

Finding Papers

- Check Loop first: Most required readings will be posted
- DCU Library: Access to most journals via library website
- Google Scholar: Often has working paper versions
- Author websites: Many economists post PDFs of their papers
- Ask me: If you can't find something, email me

Recommended Supplementary Resources

For Current Applications

- VoxEU.org / VoxDev.org — Short research summaries (5–10 min reads)
- NBER Digest — Brief summaries of working papers
- Marginal Revolution blog — Tyler Cowen & Alex Tabarrok
- The Conversation — Academic articles for general audience

For Irish Context

- ESRI (Economic and Social Research Institute) publications
- Central Bank of Ireland reports
- CSO (Central Statistics Office) data
- Irish political science journals

For Public Choice History

- Nobel Prize lectures: Buchanan (1986), Arrow (1972)
- Public Choice journal 50th anniversary retrospectives

Notes

- Full citations are provided for easier library searches
- Topics in italics describe what each paper covers
- Required readings are essential; optional are for depth
- Week 9 self-study materials cover dictatorship (not lectured in class time)
- This list combines readings from both mine and Prof. Gillanders' courses

Reading priorities:

1. Required readings
2. Optional readings for your Irish Context presentation week
3. Additional optional for Project 1 background
